

ANNIE MAUD BLACKETT 1890 – 1956

Annie Blackett was Librarian at Wanganui for 31 years from 1918 to 1949. Born in Newcastle-on-Tyne and educated in Christchurch, she did her professional training at Canterbury Public Library and was amongst the first librarians to sit professional examinations for Library administration under the auspices of the English Library Association.

During her time in Wanganui she succeeded in building the library from an underutilised facility to one of the best, most progressive institutions in the country. She introduced the childrens department and then later free membership for juniors and intermediates. She was also responsible for the planning and layout of the Alexander Building, two Library Conferences in the city and was instrumental in establishing a 'Library Course' at the Girls College.

She was president of the New Zealand Libraries Association from 1944-1945 and was later made a life member.

Miss Blackett was dedicated to her job and to her family. She had only one sister, Ellen (Nellie), who unfortunately had a psychiatric disorder and was often institutionalised and depended upon her for financial and moral support.
